CRESCENT HILL CLUB HOUSE DEDICATED.

The new club house on the very tip of Crescent Hill, at Arlington Heights, was dedicated on Tuesday evening with exercises appropriate to the occasion. Work upon the building was commenced on the Fourth of July, 1898. It will be seen that its date of beginning is suggestive of the intelligent independence and loyalty of the club. The club house has a lot of 5000 feet. Its size is 28 by 32. Mr. C. H. Kinney of Crescent Hill was the architect who drew the plans. The club house is situated at the corner of Crescent Hill and Westmoreland avenues, and overlooks a landscape scene that is seldom equalled in all that is attractive and picturesque. The structure is one story and a half in height, and has five rooms. On the first floor are the ladies' and gentlemen's reception room, the entertainment room, and the reading room, while up stairs are the billiard room, smoking and card room. The entire plan of the building is modern, and in every way up to date. The rooms, brilliantly illuminated on Tuesday evening, with its not less brilliant company, presented a scene that was altogether unique and fairy-like. The club house throughout is a model of convenience. Its cosy smoking room and reception room especially serve both as an invitation and a greeting. Its toilet room has every possible convenience, while its tasty and convenient arrangement does credit to the architect. Mr. William J. McAllister, who had charge of the plumbing of the building, deserves many good words for the intelligent thought and care he has given to the sanitary conditions of the club house.

The building committee did their part well--indeed, all who had to do with the erection of this structure, evidently wrought with that intelligence which clearly understood what was wanted. The officers of the club are the following: President, John B. Kirchmayer; vice-president, J. Henry Loran; secretary, William J. McAllister; treasurer, J. T. Lusk; trustees, John B. Kirchmayer, J. T. Lusk, H. K. Brown, C. H. Jukes, F. M. Goodwillie, C. H. Kinney, W. J. McAllister. Its membership numbers 30. President Kirchmayer made the opening address, in which he made pleasant reference to the near approach of Washington's birthday, and wherein he spoke of the loyalty to the national life which the day suggested and commemorated. The president gave somewhat in detail the object and purposes of the club had in view in the erection of its home. He stated that in its amusements there was to be no card playing for money, and there were to be no intoxicating drinks. The entire purpose of the club is the social and intellectual improvement of its members. The ladies were to be made welcome to the use of the several rooms in any afternoon or evening entertainment they

The C. L. S. C. met with Mrs. Williams, Feb. 20. Called to order by Mrs. Roberts, the vice pres. Quotations from Dryden answered the roll call. The required readings were discussed which proved very instructive, after which the members were entertained by a song entitled "Gone Away." A dainty lunch was served. The social evening was postponed, owing to the illness of Mrs. Trow, who was obliged to withdraw her invitation to the circle and their friends. Next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Adam, Mass. ave. near Franklin street, March 6.

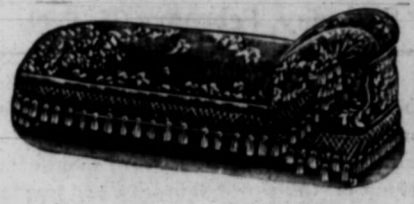

Dont forget registration this evening.
 Mr. William H. Nolan, who has been in Ashville N. C., for a month for his health, returned last Saturday fully recovered, having gained in avoirdupois and health generally. His friends gave him a cordial welcome.

The first number of the third volume of the High School Clarion will be out the 20th of March. The manager Mr. Jules E. White, trusts there will be a ready response to the subscription blanks. It is worthy of each and every pupil's hearty support.

LAST SELECT DANCE.

A BRILLIANT AND DRESSY ASSEMBLY.

The third and last of a series of select dancing parties under the management of Messrs Harold Rice, William D. Elwell, and H. Maxwell Brooks was held in Town Hall last Tuesday evening Feb. 21 st. These affairs have been beyond question the social events of the season, having been attended by the young society set of this and neighboring towns. The hall was crowded last Tuesday evening with a happy company who enjoyed every minute of the time and only regretted when the last waltz was played and their steps turned homewards. It proved to be an unusually dressy affair and a very pretty one, most of the ladies present being attired in handsome evening toilets forming a brilliant contrast to the sober dress suits of the gentlemen. The hall was decorated with flags and bunting and some handsome potted plants ornamented the front of the stage. The floor was in fine condition, the music all that could be desired, the managers did all in their power to add to the comfort of the guests and nothing was lacking which could, possibly enhance the pleasure of the evening. The matrons were Mrs. H. H. Homer, Mrs. George R. Dwellley, Mrs. W. A. Taft, Mrs. S. Fred Hicks. These ladies were handsomely gowned and received with grace and dignity. Music was furnished by Nutter's Orchestra of Chelsea, and Hardy served some delicious frappe during the intermission. We congratulate the managers on the success of the parties, and are sure that they must feel repaid for their efforts by the words of praise and thanks which they receive on every hand. The following guests were present:

AN EQUALITY OF RATIOS.

In accordance with an exact mathematical law there is an equality of ratios existing between all outward manifestations of the world about us, and the intellectual and moral capacity of every individual man and woman. The horizon shuts down at the nearest point possible to him whose farthest reaching thought seldom or never gets beyond his doorstep. To know of existence one must first exist himself. The man who is essentially dead to all the vital activities of life, substantially has his home in the graveyard in spite of the fact that his body is not six feet under ground. The truth is, the world to us is just what we make it; its size and intrinsic beauty cannot be estimated other than by taking for our unit of measurement the individual man himself. We can only know truth as we first receive it, and make it our own. To see, one must behold for himself.

There can be no God to him who has not in his innermost soul and life something of Deity. "The Heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament sheweth forth his handy work" to no man nor woman who has not first recognized in the heavens above, and amidst the starry hosts of the spacious firmament, the Creator of the universe. Man, by his innate qualities, must answer back to every beckoning call made him by the world and its myriads of transcendent delights, or otherwise no inviting call will ever come to him. No more is the world of music a blank to the deaf man than is the outward world, with its divine inspirations, a blank to him who has not the cultered eye to behold and appreciate the manifest glories that surround him on every side. The Platonic idea that man in his normal condition is possessed of all those qualities which are found in objective form in the material world, must of a necessity be right. For instance, we do not, we cannot, pour geometry into the mind of the pupil. We simply develop and bring out the geometrical qualities he has by right of inheritance. Written poetry is but the natural development of the poetical mind. Painting can only come through the artistic skill of him who is born an artist. And so it is true through the whole catalogue of studies; we but develop through a process of education that which God has implanted within the mental organism of every man, woman and child. Creation can only be so far perfected, as it is perfected in the intellectual thought and appreciation of mankind. We have often failed in our educational methods because we have vainly attempted to cram the whole world, with its varied creations into the minds of the children, when we should have put the children into the great, big world, possessed of a proper knowledge of their surroundings. In a word, we have attempted to pour in, when we should have drawn out. And all this we have done, because we have started out from premises that are altogether illogical. The world was made for man, and not man for the world, and he is bound to understand it from start to finish, because he in himself represents in his infinite creation a miniature world which corresponds in every detail to the visible world about him. We have often thought that the term "Conversion" in the religious world, an exceedingly unfortunate one. What the world most needs is not conversion, but education: not so much to be turned about so as to face the other way, as to be drawn or led forth, as the term education means in its primary signification. There is no reason why the girl and boy should not be educated into a Christian life, just as they are educated to become painters or poets. Simply develop the God there is in every human being, then will you have developed the highest type of christianity. No, "conversion" is not the term to be used in the religious world. As a matter of fact, it is true that by no natural or divine law, can you make one over anew, by simply having him face the other way. The only method under heaven by which christian manhood and christian womanhood can be assured, is by educating the children along the lines in harmony with God's eternal plan. "The stream can never rise above its source" is true every where. It is not possible for man to find other sources of enjoyment aside from those within him. All the glories of heaven must fall lifeless and meaningless upon him who has not that enlarged and appreciative capacity to take in the splendors of the New Jerusalem. Not only does an equality of ratios exist between all outward manifestations of the world about us, and the intellectual and moral capacity of every individual man and woman, but this same equality of ratios exists between every human being and the Infinite God himself. For the only

TO THE WOMEN OF ARLINGTON.

The following words of urgent advice is addressed to the women of Arlington. Possibly you do not need the advice, but we are going to give it all the same: You have two representative women for whom you have the right to cast your ballots on Monday, March the 6th, for membership upon the school board. Mrs. Peatfield, who is a candidate for re-election, has served well the educational interests of Arlington for the past three years, so that she has become favorably known to the patrons of our schools. Miss Ida F. Robbins is a new candidate in the field for membership upon the board, but nevertheless known in this community as one interested in all educational work. Now, for the honor of your sex, you women of Arlington who have the right to cast a ballot for members of the school board, should not fail to register this day, Saturday, so as to give Mrs. Peatfield and Miss Robbins a telling majority. We have but little sympathy and less love for that woman who will not take the trouble to go to the polls and cast her vote for one of her sex. We hope the time is not far distant when women may exercise the right of suffrage in as unlimited a way as we, assumed lords of creation, do. There can be no good reason why a woman shouldn't vote upon all questions of public interest, and especially it is true that they should say yea or nay upon all subjects relating to our schools. So the Enterprise urges the point, that you women all vote on the 6th of March, and thus give Mrs. Peatfield and Miss Robbins the majority they deserve. Leave your dishes unwashed for a brief while, if need be, that you may cast your ballot.

GO TO THE CHILDREN.

Go to the children if you would find that exhibition of faith which saves to the uttermost. The child believes without having first seen. The children do not ask to be shown "the print of the nails," or "the wounded side" into which they may thrust their hands. To them God is a verity, and heaven is a reality. We have sometimes thought that it would be the better ordering of our religious way of doing things, should we first allow the children to church membership, and then work among the older grown that such a conversion should come to them that would cause them to become, as the Master puts it, like the little child. Both our intellectual and religious instructions need to be a good deal inverted. We have too frequently taken it for granted that the children are nearly all wrong, while the older grown are nearly all right. We have absolutely gotten the cart before the horse. We need to right about face, and then we should make our way forward instead of backwards. We have it on scriptural authority that no one can enter the Kingdom of Heaven who does not become as the little child, and we also have it on scriptural authority that "a little child shall lead them." Just see what supreme faith the children have! A little girl but little more than four years old, whose grandmother had recently died, said to her brother, "you must not shoot your arrow into the skies anymore." Such a faith needs no creed, neither does it need any long spun-out theological discussion that God reigns in the Heavens above, and on the earth below. Yes, go to the children if you would find that faith in full measure which is not had by the churches, and which cannot be found in any of our schools of theology. The children are indeed our teachers, and wise are we if we not only willingly but gladly become their pupils.

HOW FEW THEY ARE!

How few are the people who read understandingly! There is a wide difference between skimming through a book so as to be simply able to name its author and title page, and reading it so as to make the thought of the writer one's own. You must by an inexorable law put yourself in his place, if you would take in the situation as the author took it in before you. Booth made Hamlet his own because he first entered so heartily into the life of Shakespeare, who wrote Hamlet. The elder Booth recited, as the story has it, the Lord's Prayer before that company of clergymen as they had never heard it recited before, because he interpreted it with that intenser meaning which came from his close study of it. It is difficult to find that locality which is not burdened with its number of superficial readers, who will talk to you by the hour of the latest book out, and yet say nothing; and all for the reason that they have read to no good purpose. All that is included in what is known as the better class of literature should be read with pencil in hand, copious notes should be taken and looked over and reviewed and re-reviewed at one's leisure. It isn't the quantity of our reading, but the quality, that concerns us most. We know of more than one who has been intellectually starved to death right within hand's reach of the best of libraries, because he had not been instructed in what may be termed the philosophical method of reading. It is not so, much in the number of books which one may read as it is in the how he may read the few which are his to peruse. Make the author's thought your own, or otherwise do not claim to have read him.

YOUR SENSITIVE PEOPLE.

How they will stew and fret, and make everything and everybody uncomfortable about them, by assuming that someone has treated them with cold neglect, or wounded their finer feelings by an indifferent word or by no word at all. These over sensitive men and women are constantly being stepped on. They will manage somehow to receive an affront when no affront has been given. If they are not consulted upon all occasions and upon all subjects of interest to the public, then will they declare in the secrecy of their homes, if not elsewhere, that the stupid public do not appreciate their rare intelligence. And so they go fuming and fretting through the world, because they are not recognized in each instance as the pronounced authorities which must be consulted or else all things are put in imminent danger of miscarrying. Why not accept the everlasting fact that no one individual is essential to any enterprise in any department of life. But these sensitive representatives of humanity, will persist in the egotistical assumption that they are the pivotal point upon which the world must turn, provided it is to succeed in making its revolutions. The truth is, we get out of all patience with these whining sensitive men and women. They become a nuisance. Fortunate indeed would it have been for them and the little world about them could they have measured themselves in early life by some sensible fellow, who would have, as the vulgar saying has it, "knocked the stuffing out of them." But the world will go on its accustomed way, long after they are dead and forgotten. So there is no cause for despair.

DID YOU EVER MEET SUCH?

Of course you have. We mean that man with such a sour disagreeable manner, that even a sensible dog will not wag its tail in his presence. That man, from whom the children will involuntarily run, never once looking back until they are safely in their own homes. We mean that man who is always muttering to himself; who seldom or never enters his home without a growl, who is only content as he is able to make others miserable as himself. The trouble with such a man is the unfortunate fact that he has no heart, while his liver but imperfectly secretes his excess of bile. These walking specimens of humanity are burlesques on all God's creation. They were never made living souls through the breath of the Infinite. They were indeed made in the form of man with the man left out. But what a relief it is to turn from such as these, to those great, big-souled men and women whose cheerful faces are both greetings and benedictions. Whose right hand is always the right hand of fellowship. We now refer to those whom the children love. And we have such as these too, in Arlington, and fortunately they are in the ascendancy. So, after all, we can afford to bear with those sycophantic, crawling, Uriah Heep like characters, although we occasionally feel like stepping on them.

HE DIED LONG AGO.

The man who never made a mistake died long ago, so long ago that his name is forgotten. Now just be a bit charitable, for there is nothing half so easy in all the world as to make a mistake. We have made lots of them, and we expect to make lots more. But then if every mistake or fall is as Emerson puts it, "a fall upward," then we are all right and so are you.

It is to the credit of Arlington that she has continued in public office so trustworthy and capable a citizen as Mr. D. Belmont Locke. We have known Mr. Locke from his earlier manhood, and during all this while he has been held in high esteem by this entire community. A man of unquestioned integrity, he has never betrayed the confidence of either the individual or that of the public. Accurate in all his work as town clerk, treasurer, and collector, Arlington proves herself wise in a business way to indefinitely continue Mr. Locke in the position he has filled with such scrupulous honesty.

We desire to call the attention of our readers to our well filled columns of local news reporters are on the hunt all the while for the latest items. And then please do not give the go-by to our editorial page. The fact is we are just hustling in every department of journalism, so as to give our readers a live paper. There is no napping it in the Enterprise office.

We called on Mr. George P. Wynn on Tuesday at his home, where we were glad to learn that his daughter, Miss Nina Winn, who has been ill for several weeks, was at that time improving. Miss Winn is a young lady who is much beloved by the people of Arlington who have much sympathy for her in her illness. It is hoped by all that Miss Winn may soon recover her usual health, and be able to resume her accustomed place among the young people of Arlington.

"WHERE ARE WE AT?"

It may be asked very properly, and a good deal anxiously, too, "where are we at?" so far as the government of the Philippines by the administration at Washington is concerned. Now it comes that Manila is fired, and that buildings bearing red marks are reduced to ashes by natives. How long is this work of devastation and destruction to go on? What may we not expect next? President McKinley cannot wisely delay longer a positive declaration of whatever plans the national administration may have concerning the government of the Philippine Islands. The general statement that he made when in Boston, that this entire question of the final disposal of those islands is in the hands of the American people, will not satisfy the great masses of our countrymen. Unkind as it may seem to say it, yet it is too true that President McKinley has too long kept his ear to the ground, for the sole purpose of catching what he might suppose to be the popular voice. Had the administration carried on the war, from beginning to end, along the lines of its manifesto made last April, then all this deadly trouble in which we are now involved, would have been averted. Why isn't it possible that the Filipinos feel that they are contending for their identity and continuance, as we felt in the war of the rebellion? The time, however, for discussion has gone by, and something must be done to stop this irregular and bloody warfare. Let the administration now show the American people that it has some definite plan concerning these islands, and with that plan that it has some backbone.

THE 22D OF FEBRUARY.

The 22d of February belongs to the whole country, because the life and memory of George Washington belong to the entire American people. Washington was great, first because he was honest. He had nothing of the truckling politician about him. He saw the situation as it was, and then measured up to it. Of the most positive convictions, he at times seemed almost obstinate in yielding his judgment to him who had a better plan. Washington was, however, usually right in his idea of methods and subject matter. His name will live on so long as our republican form of government shall endure. The day here in Arlington was without formal demonstration. The stars and stripes were here and there unfurled to the breeze, and a few of our people went to Boston to shake hands with the governor, otherwise the day was very like the more ordinary days of February.

We repeat that the Enterprise is for everybody. All our readers can claim space in these columns for any expression of opinion he or she may have either in the world of politics or religion, however much opposed those opinions may be to those entertained by us. Please remember that we have no friends to reward or enemies to punish. We shall have our say, and you may have yours. While we are trying very hard to love everybody, we fear nobody. So come on with whatever you may have to say and please do not forget that the Enterprise is not run in the interest of any one man, or in the interest of any one political party, or in the interest of any one religious denomination. Our platform is as broad as the world, and it takes in the whole human kind.

It will be remembered by some of the older people in Arlington how that Thackeray, Sumner, Longfellow and Holmes enjoyed themselves at Porter's Hotel, in Cambridge, thirty years ago or more at an oyster supper, gotten up expressly for the benefit of that distinguished company. Thackeray had never before eaten an American oyster, and the oyster here being so much larger than those in his own country, the rest of the company were curious to know how he enjoyed our luscious bivalve. In reply to their query for information on this point, Thackeray replied: "I much enjoy your feast, though in swallowing your oyster I felt that I had swallowed a live baby."

The man who insists that he is never tempted, would blush for very shame, did the world know his weaknesses. Why not be honest with ourselves and confess that we are tempted in an almost infinite number of ways. It would take a long while to find him who has kept the ten commandments, while you would not be compelled to hunt long for him who in spirit at least, had broken them all from top to bottom.

The unanimous nomination of Miss Ida F. Robbins to membership upon our board of school committee is one of those rare instances in hand "where the office seeks not the man," but the woman; for Miss Robbins received not even a hint that she was to be nominated.

Gov. Wolcott shook hands with just 2600 men, women and children at the reception he gave on Washington's birthday.

The man true to himself, will be true to others; while he who is false to himself will be false to the whole world beside.

Christ would never have said "let him who is without sin cast the first stone," unless he had known human nature through and through.

Excessive legislation, both State and National, has become a source of anxiety and a burden to the people generally. The fewer and simpler the laws, the better it is for both state and nation. There seems to be a peculiar charm in "be it enacted." We heartily believe in biennial sessions of our state legislatures, and we are confident that the country at large would be the gainer, were our national congress to assemble biennially instead of annually.

Miss Lizzie Ryan teacher in the Brighton School, is suffering at her home from grip.

The Syndicate block now in process of building, will not be ready for occupancy until May or June.

The last chance to register for the coming town meeting, occurs to day Saturday, and this evening.

Services are to be held every Wednesday and Friday evening in St. Joseph's Church during the Lenten season.

The proposed sleigh ride by the High School pupils, to have been taken on Saturday evening, was postponed on account of the rain.

The Knights of Columbus held a meeting in Waverly Hall on Tuesday evening. Two applications for membership were received.

Washington's birthday was as quiet in this village as the average Sunday. Where were the stars and stripes? We didn't see them flying from every house top.

The Round About Club will meet at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Halliwell on School street next Tuesday evening. James Whitcomb Riley will be the subject.

Miss Alice Stone Blackwell addressed a large meeting of ladies on the suffrage question in the Sunday School Room of the Unitarian Church, last Monday afternoon.

Getting about town is simply abominable. Slush and mud in abundance, why would't it be a good plan when clearing the sidewalks after a storm, to get down to solid earth?

The Standard Oil Company had its three truck team stuck fast in the mud at this point the other day. Mr. Lewis Locke proved himself the good Samaritan who put the team safely on its way.

A "Subscription party" in which the mazy dance will rule the hour, will be held on Wednesday evening March 1st, in the Town Hall. Brigham's orchestra of 10 pieces from Marlboro is to furnish the music.

The meeting of the Woman's Alliance in the Sunday School Room of the Unitarian Church, next Monday afternoon, may be expected to be quite interesting. The subject will be the "Spiritual Value of Art."

Mr. Frank W. Gilcreas our village druggist, who has been ill for several weeks, is so far recovered as to be out, but not yet able to attend to business. Mr. Gilcreas has been greatly missed from his accustomed place behind the counter.

The pupils of the High school are putting in their best practice for the minstrel entertainment they are to give on the evening of March 9. Tickets are out, and selling rapidly. The advertising space on the program is already filled.

Joseph Quigley, is one of the most agreeable and efficient post-office clerks that Uncle Sam has in the postal department. He hands out your mail with that abounding good nature which is substantially an invitation for you to come again.

The Belmont Tennis Club is to give an enjoyable party in the Town Hall on this Saturday evening. Dancing from eight to twelve o'clock. The Matrons are Mrs. Edwin P. Atkins, Mrs. Alfred E. Elson, Mrs. James Cutler and Mrs. William K. Jewett.

Mr. Joseph L. Frost, who has been "under the weather" for the past two months, is improving. Mr. Frost is one of our most reliable citizens. All will be glad to learn of his complete restoration to health. Mr. Frost for more than thirty years has been employed in Mr. Adam's grocery store.

Mr. J. W. Dean, ticket agent at the Boston & Maine station in Belmont, has not been absent from his post of duty for the past 13 years but four days, a most commendable record of faithfulness to duty. Mr. Dean was a brave and valiant soldier in the war of the Rebellion. In 1862 he enlisted as a private in Co. K. 35th Mass. Regiment, and subsequently was promoted to the office of sergeant on the field of Antietam in which battle he was four times wounded. A brief while after, he was promoted to the Lieutenantancy. After that hard fought battle of Antietam was well over, Lieutenant Dean was honorably discharged on account of his wounds. He almost immediately thereafter received an appointment in the Veteran Reserve invalid corps, his commission being signed by Abraham Lincoln. He was soon appointed on the staff of Arlington Heights locals continued. Chester Unitarian Church. The dining room has been furnished by friends, and $10 to the china. So it will be seen that the Winchester Home for Aged People has a strong hold upon the hearts of Winchester people. Such a home is needed in Arlington, not only for the helpless aged poor but for that more fortunate class in this world's goods. We need these more or less frequent calls upon us for help, so that our better selves may be reached. The home here in Arlington is a most worthy object, and it must favorably appeal to all our citizens. We would suggest that our clergymen inform themselves of the plan of those having this matter in mind and then urge the home upon the attention of their individual churches and societies. There can be no ministry on earth more divine than that which takes into its immediate consideration the aged poor at our very doors. The Arlington home for aged people cannot fail of becoming a veritable institution with us if all will lend a helping hand.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Bixby, Jr. are to be congratulated on the arrival to their home of a promising boy.

Mr. and Mrs. E. P. White entertained at their home on Tuesday evening the Tip-top Whist Club. Mrs. H. H. Kendall and Mr. A. H. Gorham won the prizes.

Mr. Charles Forbes is building on Crescent Hill a convenient, cosy cottage.

Mrs. G. F. Youngs is ill of Bright's disease.

The grip is loosening its hold upon our people. Mrs. Lewis and Miss Ella Vickery are both improving.

Rev. H. V. Vinal, pastor of the Arlington Heights Baptist Church is being very much liked by his people. The Sunday school is doing a good work under its superintendent, Mr. John White. The excellent choir, consisting of a quartet, is adding much to the interest of the services. The choir is composed of the following membership: Mr. Harlan Bean, Mr. Jason Swadkins, Miss Blanche Swadkins and Miss Lydia Campbell. Cottage prayer meetings are now being held each week from house to house, in which much interest is manifested. The church already has secured a building site, upon which it will erect a house of worship at an early date.

Rev. H. V. Vinal, pastor of the Arlington Heights Baptist Church is being very much liked by his people. The Sunday school is doing a good work under its superintendent, Mr. John White. The excellent choir, consisting of a quartet, is adding much to the interest of the services. The choir is composed of the following membership: Mr. Harlan Bean, Mr. Jason Swadkins, Miss Blanche Swadkins and Miss Lydia Campbell. Cottage prayer meetings are now being held each week from house to house, in which much interest is manifested. The church already has secured a building site, upon which it will erect a house of worship at an early date.

CRESCENT HILL CLUB HOUSE.

might wish to give. President Kirchmayer's address was heartily applauded. Mr. H. Thomas Elder, who has resided for many years on Crescent Hill, spoke pleasantly and with no little enthusiasm to the assembled audience. The soloists, Mr. William H. S. Hill of Watertown, Mr. Thomas V. McCrone of East Boston and Mr. William Sheel of Roxbury, all rendered with artistic taste selections from our best composers. Mr. A. H. McIntosh of East Cambridge entertained the company by his fine execution on the banjo. The pianist, W. Varney, played several solos, much to the delight of his hearers. Miss M. E. Stone sang with much expression, and gave piano solos; Mr. John Gunner also rendered solos, and Mr. John T. Lusk made merry the hour by his comic songs.

All who had to do with the musical part of the program were so enthusiastically encored that they were compelled to repeat themselves. A collation was served, after which many of the company enjoyed the dance which followed.

It may be written down that the opening evening of the Crescent Hill Club House was an eminent success. The ladies and gentlemen who came together to celebrate the occasion were unanimous in their best wishes for the future growth and prosperity of the club. The club has been exceedingly fortunate in its selection of a site. The view from the tip of Crescent Hill, as we have already said, is unsurpassed. As we made our way homeward from the hill on Tuesday evening, we were delightfully impressed with the extended scene, as we viewed it under the softened rays of the moonlight. If we were on the hunt for a poet, we should first of all betake ourselves to Crescent Hill, for there the surroundings are altogether poetical. We enjoyed to the full the evening with all its varied exercises. Our pleasant chat with President Kirchmayer, Mr. F. M. Goodwillie and Mr. Benjamin G. Jones was to us an enjoyable and instructive half hour. Our song at this writing is, may the Crescent Hill Club long live and flourish, and may its new and commodious home add, as it must, to its social and literary advantages.

It is through the courtesy of the Boston Herald that we have the above cut of the club house.

A brief interview, the other morning, with Mr. J. T. Trowbridge, the distinguished writer, at his home on Pleasant street, was to us especially enjoyable. To read him is delightful, but to meet him is still more delightful. His cheerful, sunny presence makes doubly welcome the caller. The writings of Mr. Trowbridge have made his name familiar not only in all literary circles the world over, but in every household as well. Who has not read and re-read with ever increasing delight his "Vagabond"? His dog "Roger" is made to touch the hearts of men and women wherever found, by the faithful and pathetic companionship he evinces for his unfortunate but loving master. And the poor vagabond, how he appeals to our sympathy and love as he reveals in his half delirium all the better feelings of his nature. Mr. Trowbridge gets a strong and affectionate hold on the reader because he writes with a heart filled with love for his kind.
